Overview and Intended Audience

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that more than 1.1 million people are living with HIV in the United States. One in seven (15%) of those people living with HIV is unaware of their infection.

Despite increases in the total number of people living with HIV in the U.S. in recent years, the annual number of new HIV infections has remained relatively stable. However, new infections continue at far too high a level, with an estimated 39,513 Americans becoming infected with HIV in 2015. Pennsylvania is ranked seventh in the nation, with 31,400 Pennsylvanians living with HIV/AIDS.

Significant health disparities are evident in HIV-infected individuals in this country. African Americans represent 45% of new HIV infections but only 12% of the population, while Latinos represent 24% of new HIV infections and 18% of our population.

Advances in the treatment of HIV/AIDS have extended the lives of many. AIDS is now considered a chronic disease. There is convincing evidence that if we can diagnose and treat all persons with HIV in the United States, we could dramatically slow the growth of new HIV cases to near zero. The annual World AIDS Day conference provides an overview of timely clinical and psychosocial issues related to the care of persons living with HIV/AIDS. This conference has been developed with the input of physicians and other health professionals, as well as consumers and prior attendees, through conference evaluations.

This conference is intended for physicians, psychologists, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, pharmacists, social workers, health educators, peers, and all individuals interested in learning more about HIV/AIDS. This is a knowledge-based activity.

Objectives

- To update participant's overall knowledge of HIV care
- To increase the participant's understanding of new programmatic platforms
- To increase engagement and retention of patients in HIV care and quality
- To increase the participant's understanding of PrEP from a patient perspective
- To expand the participant's knowledge of trauma informed care
- To increase the participant's knowledge of drug use and HIV
