Challenges in Internal Medicine is a 3-day CME program sponsored by the Department of Medicine of the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai. The goal of this course is to offer providers of primary care services with the newest pharmacologic and technologic breakthroughs, updates in clinical therapeutic guidelines, and highlights of recent advances in the practice of Internal Medicine. The intended audience for this course is Internists, Family Practitioners, Nurse Practitioners and Physician Assistants.

Primary care is growing increasingly more difficult due to the complexity of the patient’s medical condition coupled with advances in clinical management. This course is geared to help providers practice evidence-based medicine from today’s scientific literature. The outcome from this format is to help the clinician to better manage their patients using the latest evidence based practices.

All of the discussants incorporate recent scientific literature for their talks. Importantly, many of the lectures chosen are from the current year’s Divisional and Departmental Grand Rounds.
