Statement of need: The diagnosis and treatment of gastrointestinal and liver disorders has advanced rapidly. The downside of this rapid pace is that many providers, both in the community and even those in teaching centers, find it difficult to keep up with these advances. Consequently, patients may have inadequate access to the most current care. Our CME conference is designed to address the most topical, immediately impactful, and up-to-date issues in GI and liver diseases, filling these knowledge gaps through a concise one-day overview presented by regional and national experts. The knowledge gained will be immediately transferrable back to patient care.

Program objectives: All Northwell Health CME activities are intended to improve patient care, safety and outcomes. At the conclusion of this conference participants should be able to:

- Differentiate between C. difficile infection and active inflammatory bowel disease. They will be able to apply this new knowledge to differentiate the two and incorporate into their treatment plans to improve patient outcomes.
- Differentiate reflux esophagitis from eosinophilic esophagitis. They will be able to apply this correct diagnosis to appropriate tailored therapy for their patients.
- Examine the risks and benefits of different therapeutic modalities for the management of gastrointestinal bleeding. As such they will be able to incorporate these modalities into the care of their patients to improve outcomes.

Target audience: This program is designed for physicians and physician assistants. Other members of the health care team, including registered nurses, nurse practitioners, residents, medical students and fellows are invited to attend.

Joint accreditation statement: In support of improving patient care, Northwell Health is jointly accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE), and the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC), to provide continuing education for the health care team.
