TexasHealth.org/CME
This symposium is designed for ophthalmologists. We invite technicians, nurses and allied health professionals involved in the evaluation and management of general ophthalmic diseases to also attend this symposium. Reports on therapies, new procedures and technologies developed in the field of ophthalmology, and a desire to maintain ethical standards for physicians and other health care professionals are contributing factors used in selecting topics for this symposium. The overall goal is to improve the quality of care provided to the patient population served by the attendees. This symposium will deal with common cases and solutions presented via didactic lectures and panel discussions.

Upon completion of this symposium, the participants should be able to:

• Discuss the indications, contraindications and efficacy of corneal cross linking.
• Review the best methodology and technique for trabeculoplasty and formulate who the best candidates are for the procedure.
• Review the most serious and emergent diagnoses in uveitis.
• Define the many manifestations and sequelae of this difficult to manage complex disease.
• Review the latest anesthetic agents along with their common and rare side effects.
• Improve the clinical evaluation and surgical techniques available to address weak zonules, floppy iris and other related conditions.
• Recognize the status of the macula in vein occlusion, pucker and ARMD.
• Review and manage the various causes of visual loss due to retinal disease before and after cataract surgery.
• Identify when cataract surgery alone is sufficient and when glaucoma surgery should be combined with cataract surgery to manage patients with both diseases.
• Determine the best way to alleviate astigmatism with a LRI or a TORIC IOL.
• Review the evaluation and management of thyroid eye disease.
• Describe the best ways to improve compliance with glaucoma therapy.
• Explain new methods to obtain a more realistic understanding of ocular biomechanics and intraocular pressure.
• Review current imaging and what’s on the horizon in new technology.
• Explain what causes a refractive surprise after cataract surgery and how to prevent it.
• Review case studies dealing with the ethics of health care reform.
